Skin designer takes you under the sea for the coolest Halloween costume ever. Use your favourite colours and fix your hair to match. Leave everyone gasping for oxygen!

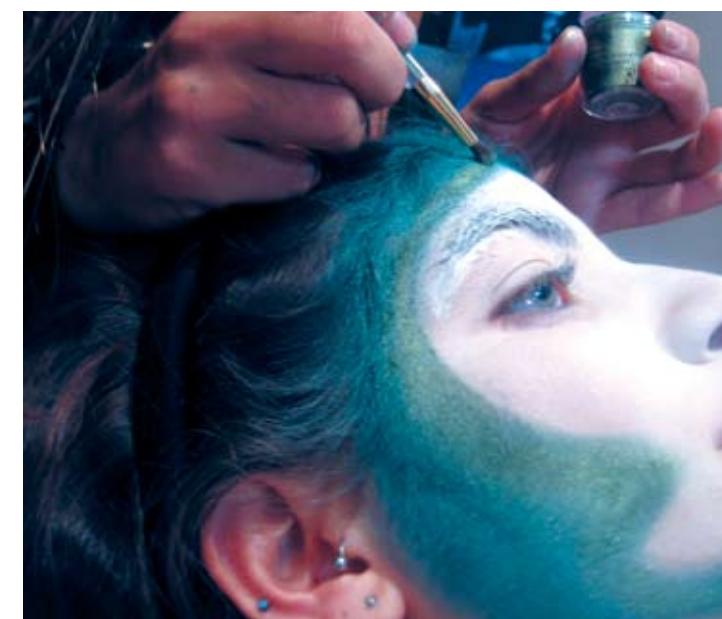

► Cover your face with a foundation of your skin tone until it's an even shade of colour. Go over the foundation with white powder making sure to cover every inch.

Use a white lipstick on your mouth and eyebrows. Pucker-up, then make an outline of your face with a blue pencil; make sure to move into the hollow of your cheeks.

Fill in the area between the hairline and halfway to the blue outline with a dark green shade. Leave room for the lighter green shade to fill in the second half.

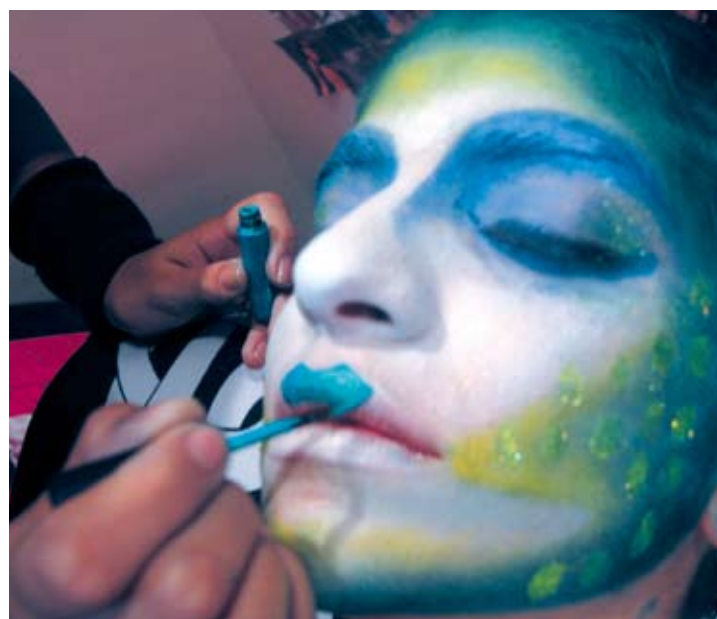

From the end of your brow line down to the middle of your nose, fill with a metallic purple to define the eyes. Use yellow eyeshadow to define the fish cheeks.

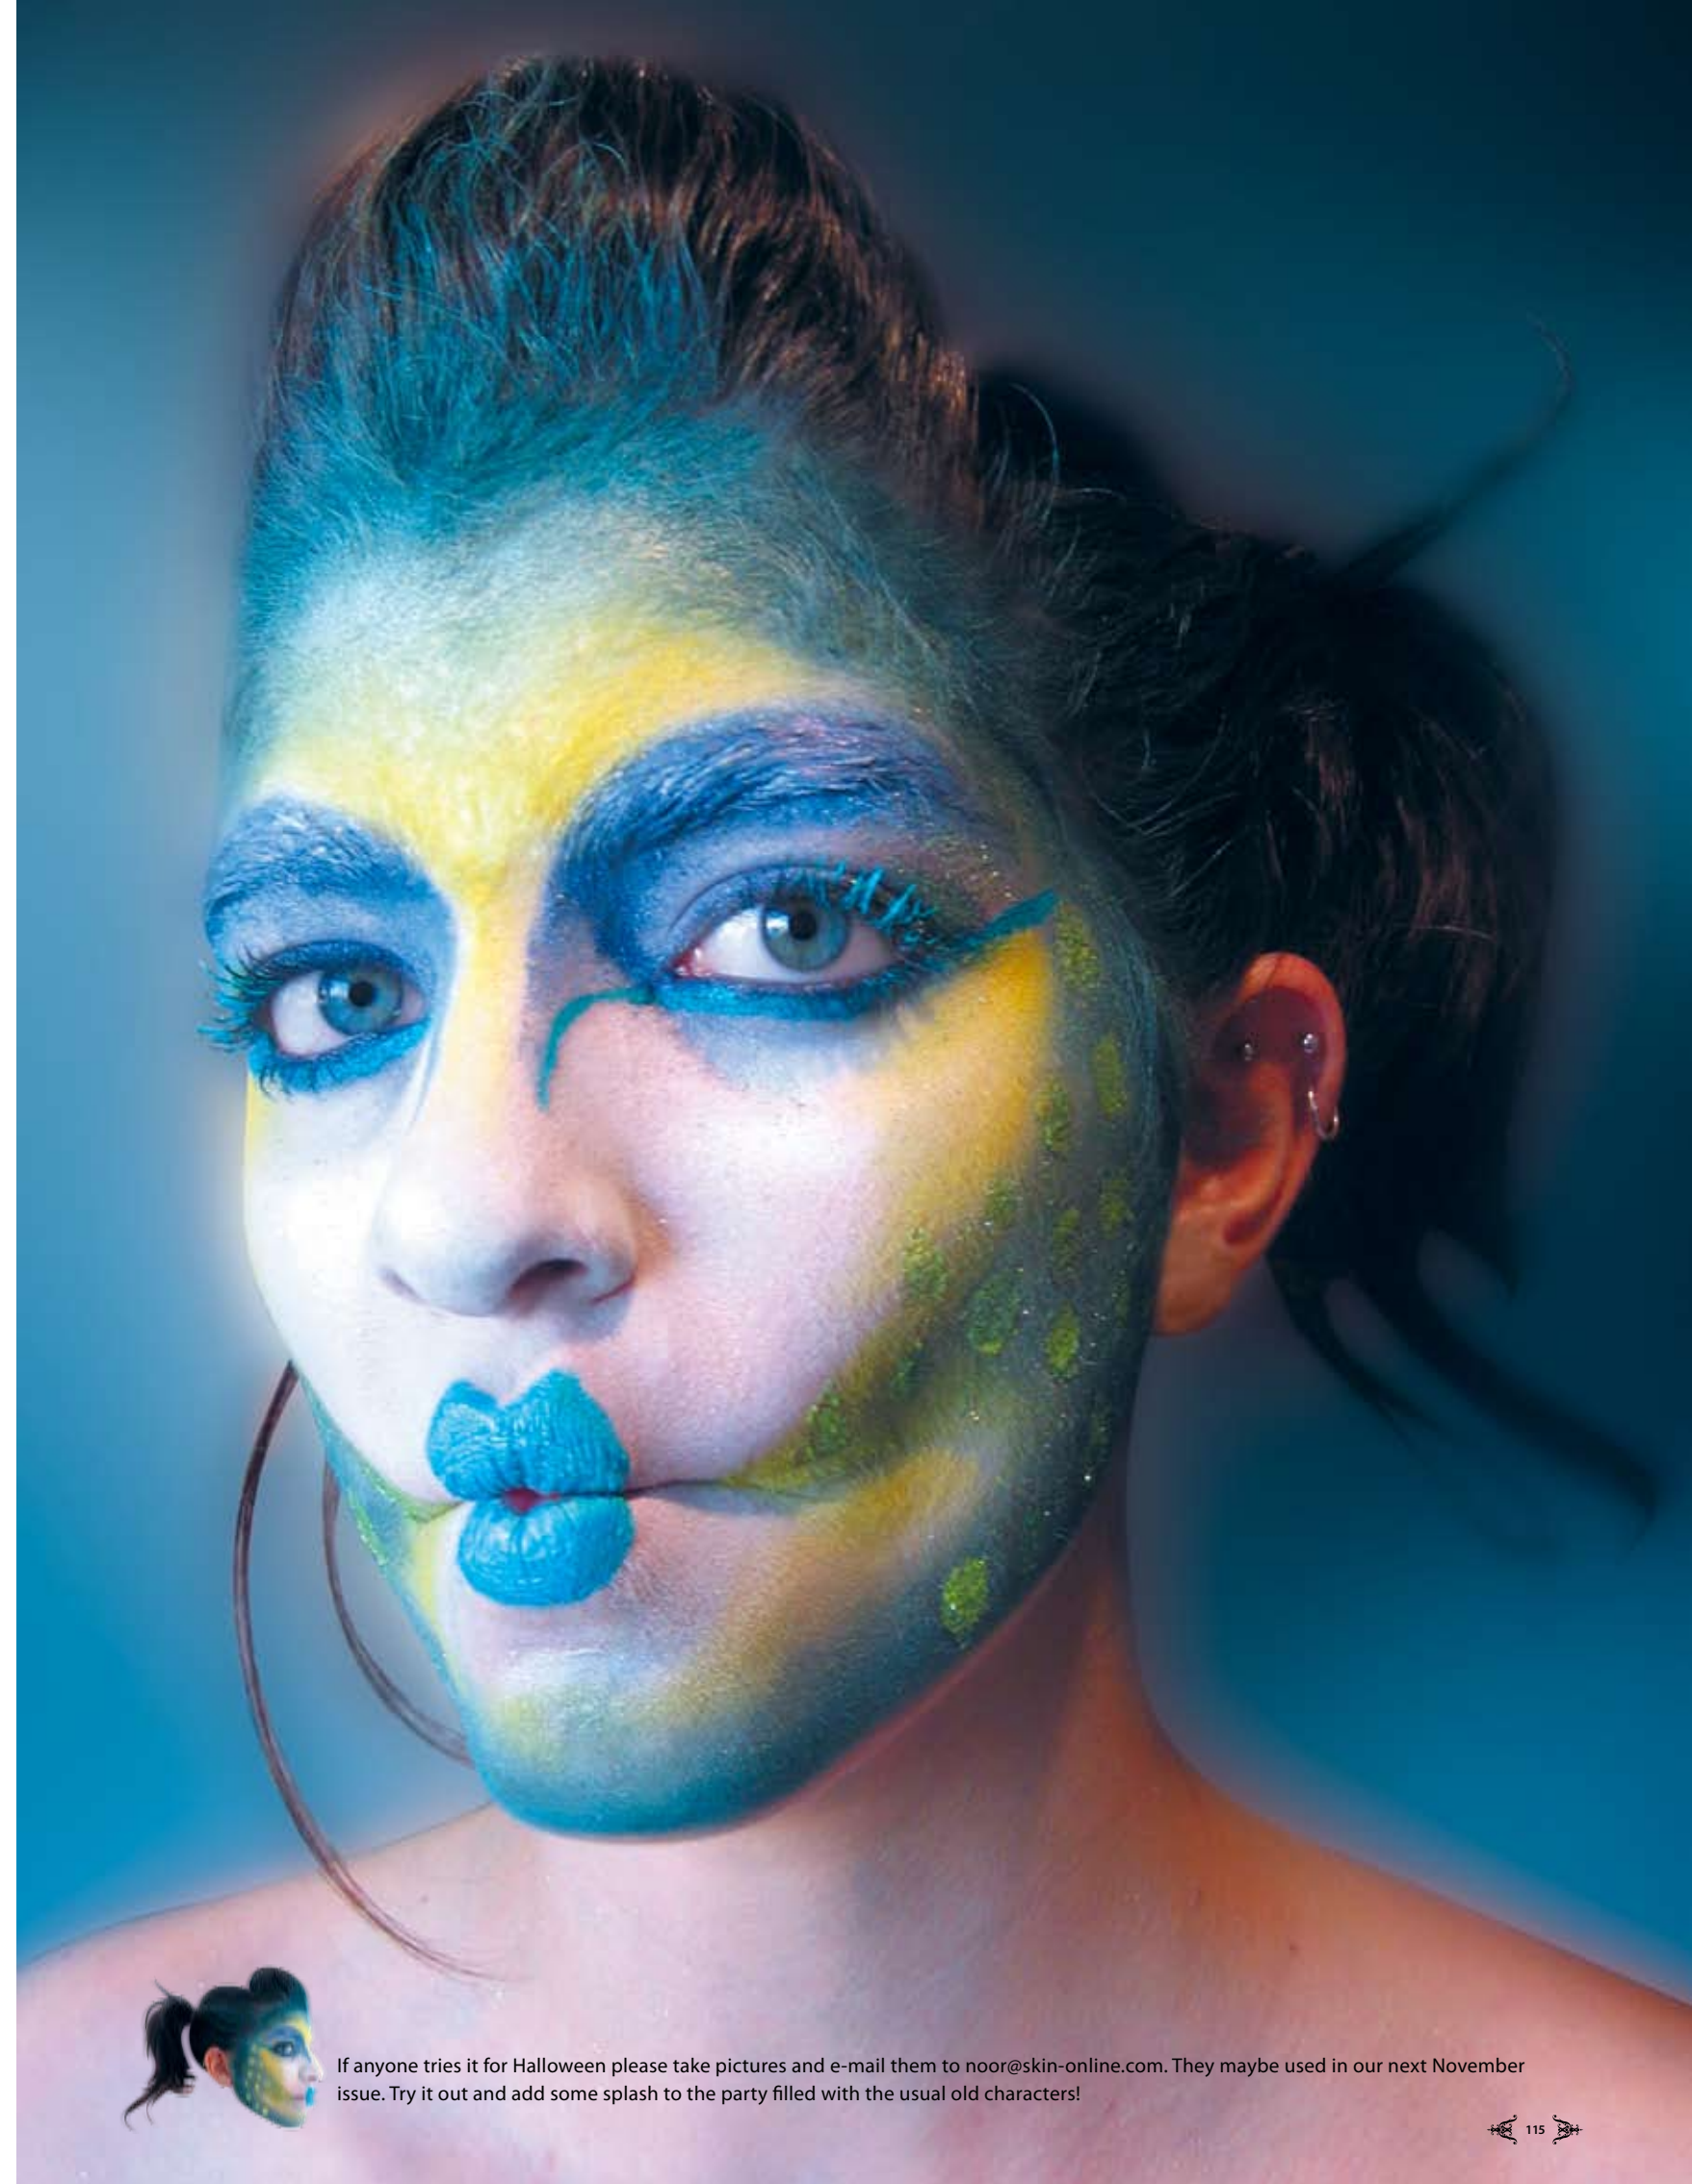

Add yellow sparkle gel to the green area to create a scaly fish effect. Draw a thick blue line under the eyes to make them (figuratively) pop out of your head.

And to my favourite part: use a fluorescent blue to fill the middle of the lips. Use the same colour to add a curvaceous line under the eyes to connect the whole look.

To perfect the look, wear blue or green contacts (if your eyes aren't already aquatic) and style your hair to the shape of your favourite water dweller – let it have a tail and some fins. Swim into your Halloween party pucker-up for maximum effect! Hopefully your fish memory will help you forget where you learned this by the time you scrub off the make-up... ●

If anyone tries it for Halloween please take pictures and e-mail them to noor@skin-online.com. They maybe used in our next November issue. Try it out and add some splash to the party filled with the usual old characters!
